“ *My best memory of Kevin was the first night I met him. He was in his 63 vette with the top down and we went for a ride. There was 3 of us in that vette and I got stuck sitting in the middle. We had a ball! Marie, I am so sorry to hear about him but I know he loved you and the kids dearly.
God speed Himey!*

“ Kevin was there to welcome me on my first day of work at ILJIN, and he unselfishly taught me whatever I needed to know. I didn't know him outside of work, but seeing a person nearly every day for almost 6 years can create a bond, and despite me being a yankee, it was easy to bond with Kevin. He was easy to talk to and we fell into a relationship of cracking jokes to make each other laugh. One time, we took a two-day work trip to Florida that left us both with some great memories. On our way down, tornadoes were touching down throughout Alabama, and we were driving through severe weather which caused us to miss eating at Bates House of Turkey. Once in a while, we would wish for another work trip so we could be sure to eat there. We went to a steakhouse where Kevin patiently listened to me have a 5 minute discussion with the waitress about the steaks, only to look at me in disbelief when I ordered the chicken. That was the trip where he also listened to me ask, at every place we ate, "Do you have hand cut fries?" After that, we had a number of discussions about the benefits of hand cut fries over frozen. I think I convinced him, because I believe he actually went through a period of time where he bought a potato cutter and began making hand cut fries at home. I enjoyed that trip. Even though it was a long drive, and we were stuck in traffic in Atlanta on the way back, I wouldn't change it for anything. Kevin talked, I talked, and we laughed and laughed and laughed. That's how my relationship went with him over the years, and that's how I'll remember him...smiling and laughing. I can only offer my condolences to your family. You have the thoughts and prayers of everyone in the Edwards family.
