“ Our mother was a great lady though small in stature she was a giant in heart and personality. I am who I am now because of her and her love she gave us kids. We were five kids all with our own opinions and ways of doing things, but no matter how much we fought (and believe me we fought) she always had the ability to bring us back together and settle the issues one way or another. She was tough when she had to be (as short as she was that did not stop her from giving me what for upside the head) but loving when she knew she needed to be. I was able to have my birthday with the two women I love the most in this whole world, my Mom and my Wife. Sadly my heart feels half empty with her passing, she was the first half until I met my wife to make my heart whole. My heart is still whole as she will always be there only just in spirit. She made me the man I am and the loving husband my wife deserves. I love you mom, always.

“ Although I did not know Marilyn Personally, I've become really good friends with her son Jeff...we both served in the military, retired, and now work together....so we have a lot in common. Jeff is an awesome, hard working person...and gets the job done regardless. This type of work ethic is driven into someone early in life...and I can tell his mom played a huge role in molding him properly. To me this says a lot about his mom and what type of person she was. Despite the sadness, I want this family to heal quickly and know Marilyn is alright now. The Lord will watch over us all during times like these and keep us moving forward in a positive direction.
